Data protection and privacy regulators are strengthening their enforcement activities and consumers are more active in seeking compensation for infringements of their rights. At the same time, new technologies coupled with increased use of apps and social media raise the level of risk for data breaches and cyber-attacks.

This web conference will compare the emerging global data privacy laws and standards and provide practical advice on how to implement or update a data privacy compliance program.

Topics include:

- the development of data protection laws
- current laws and regulations
- key risk areas
- ensuring data provenance
- developing and implementing policies
- recognising the costs of non-compliance
